DEPENDS ON WEYLER

Result of His Campaign Being Anxiously Awaited.

NOT LIKELY TO WHIP MACEO.

General Lee Very Reticent on the Cuban Situation and President Cleveland's Message on the Subject. It is Said, Will Be Held in Abeyance to the Very Last Moment.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—All public men in Washington realize that the Cuban situation is grave. President Cleveland, his cabinet, and all officials and diplomats are anxiously awaiting results of the next two weeks. All seem to agree that the crisis is connected with General Weyler's campaign against Maceo. There are good grounds for believing that Consul General Lee is in favor of intervention in the interest of securing the autonomy of Cuba if General Weyler's campaign does not result in a more peaceful solution of the present difficulty than is expected. General Lee is diplomatically reticent, however, as to his views on the situation.

General Lee being asked when he expected to return to Havana said: "I do not know. A great deal will depend upon developments there within the next few days. I do not deny that the situation is serious, but I very much deprecate the talk of war between the United States and Spain, and am especially sorry to see statements attributed to me in this direction which I have not made."

President Cleveland.

The Cuba feature of the president's message will not be written until something definite is heard as to the result of General Weyler's military operations in Pinar del Rio. No one can say now how the president will deal with the question in his message. Should General Weyler be repulsed or should he return to Havana without accomplishing any results at all, everything would be in a chaotic state in Cuba and Spain, and there is no telling what the consequences would be. Of the possibilities connected with General Weyler's campaign, a complete victory over Maceo is considered least likely to occur. From the reports Consul General Lee has made to the president and secretary of state upon the military feature of the situation, the authorities expect that General Weyler will not succeed in dislodging Maceo from his mountain fastnesses, and that he will soon return to Havana, discredited as a military commander, both with the authorities at Madrid and his officers and troops in Cuba. It is this phase of the situation that is causing the chief concern.

FRAUD CHARGED.

Suit Brought to Set Aside the Sale of a Railroad.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 17.—Dwight Braman of Boston, Mass., a bondholder of the St. Louis and San Francisco railway filed an equity bill in the United States circuit court yesterday praying for the setting aside of the foreclosure sale of the road on the ground of fraud.

Mr. Braman sues on behalf of himself, the holder of $115,000 worth of consolidated mortgage bonds of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway company and of all other holders of consolidated Frisco bonds. The complainant names as defendants the St. Louis and San Francisco railway, the defunct company, and the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad its successor, organized by the foreclosure purchasers.

Mr. Braman in his prayer petitions the circuit court to declare the foreclosure sale of the Frisco assets to be null and void; to enjoin the officers of the St. Louis and San Francisco railway from issuing any kind of bonds on the property; and to appoint receivers for the St. Louis and San Francisco railway and the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad. He says that in order to induce United States Judge Caldwell to sign the decree of foreclosure of the Frisco, which he did last April, the defendants conspired to make false representations and reports to Judge Caldwell.

River Coal Mines to Be Closed.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 16.—At a meeting yesterday of the river coal operators, preliminary steps were taken which will likely result in the closing down of almost all the river mines and throw 6,000 miners out of employment from December to Feb. 1 next. The argument of the operators for this suspension is that the market is overstocked, there being 10,000,000 bushels or more in this harbor, besides a large quantity already in southern harbors.

Dr. Pedro Betancourt.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 17.—Word was received in this city yesterday by Cuban sympathizers that Dr. Pedro Betancourt, a surgeon in the Cuban army and one of those prominent in the revolutionary movement, has been killed by the Spaniards. ## LANDED IN CUBA.

Rescue Treatment of a Shipwrecked Crew by Spanish Soldiers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Among the passengers who arrived on the Yucatan from Havana were Captain Nelson and 12 of the crew of the British steamer Coyula, which ran ashore on Colorado reef on Nov. 4 and was later abandoned, the crew landing on the Cuban coast 60 miles west of Havana, where they fell into the hands of Spanish soldiers.

Henry W. Delaney, one of the shipwrecked crew said yesterday: "On landing in Cuba we were taken in charge by a troop of soldiers who escorted us to a sugar estate. Here they used us very kindly, but they had strong suspicion that we were American filibusters. Later in the day a troop of soldiers took us to Marial, where they insisted that I could speak Spanish. I was taken to the headquarters and questioned by a big Spaniard who asked if we were English or American. I answered 'English.' 'No, American,' said he, striking me on the neck and over the head with a loaded cane stunning me. The blood ran down my face and back, and I felt quite weak, and as three soldiers pointed their guns at me I expected to be shot. The Spaniards failing to learn that there were Americans among our crew, I was dismissed. We were compelled to sleep on the bare floor, with soldiers on guard. We were then sent to Havana, where we were cared for by the British consul. If we had been Americans we would never have lived to tell the tale."

'The Democrats who worked with and supported the Republican party in the late campaign will be gladly welcomed again into the ranks of the Democratic party, but only as silver Democrats. The Democratic party is now a silver party. There cannot be two Republican parties.'"

"The charge that I deserted the Democratic party in 1892 and voted for General Weaver. When one considers that only four years ago the democratic party won a presidential election and obtained control of both branches of congress, its present condition is pitiable indeed. Without a head, without an organization and without even a principle around which to rally the disorganized fragments of a once powerful political organization, it furnishes a warning to all political parties, of the punishment which the people administer to incapacity.

The Columbus Herald, which was an active advocate of sound money until the Chicago platform was made and then fell into line with the free silver push, says: "The east went overwhelmingly against the democrats. And the great west, which was so surely promised to us by those who committed the party to its policy, did not come to us. States that were said to be solid for that policy went from 50,000 to 100,000 against us. The democratic party was misled and betrayed—doubly betrayed. In reaching out after populist votes we lost from two to three democratic votes for every one we gained."

CHAIRMAN HANNA has written a Washington friend virtually confirming the rumor that the Republican National committee would shortly open permanent headquarters in Washington, from which the educational fight against the free silver fallacy, which is to go right along until the truth has been argued into the heads of all misguided people, shall be directed. This move would have been generally commended anyway, but the announcement that the silver committee, the populist committee, and the democrat committee intended to maintain permanent Washington headquarters and to keep up the distribution of silver literature, made it almost necessary. The silver sentiment would not have been half so extensive if its opponents had met argument with argument, instead of wasting time laughing at the silver men sending out campaign literature several years ahead of the campaign, and doing nothing themselves. Mr. Hanna knows how hard it was to undo in a few weeks the work that the silver men had been doing for several years; hence he has from the day the campaign closed favored a continuation of the education of the voters on the silver question.

BRYAN in an interview shows that he is now sorry for some things. He said: "The democratic party is now a silver party. There can not be two republican parties. The charge that grieved me most and was unjust, was that I had deserted the democratic party in 1892 and voted for General Weaver. Those who made the charge knew we had fusion in Nebraska and that I acted upon the recommendation of the chairman of the National Democratic committee. These men will find it very hard now to accuse me of not being a democrat."

It is understood that the receivership of the main line of the Vandavia will not be in force as long as is generally the case in receivership matters; that when it is ended the Peoria and Logansport branches will no longer be under the Vandavia control, the line from Indianapolis to St. Louis will be Pennsylvania property proper, and it is likely there will be a change of names, says the Indianapolis News. There seems little doubt that one of the principal reasons for a receiver was to lop off the two branches that have been a constant expense to the main line. The Pennsylvania Co., owns some stock in the branches, but it is not responsible for their debts. It has mortgages on the main line, and these it will foreclose and take possession of the property, while the Peoria and Logansport branches will revert to the original bondholders, will become separate corporations once more, and receivers will be appointed for them. When the mortgages on the main line are foreclosed, the lease that the Vandavia has on the branches becomes void. The report is that when the main line mortgage is foreclosed all of the Pennsylvania rules and the manner in which that company does business will become operative on the Vandavia.

Never Heard Of It.

Yesterday morning The Express printed the following dispatch from Indianapolis: "The Indiana Republican congressmen elect have decided to refer all applications for post office appointments to the patrons of the postoffices and elections will be held in every city and town of the state after March 4th."

"The congressmen-elect have hit upon this plan to avoid the responsibility of making appointments themselves, and will recommend no one who has not received a majority of the votes of the Republican patrons of the office to which he aspires."

"This conclusion is said to have been reached through correspondence between the members-elect, and applicants have been notified of the fact. In some localities, where party workers believe they have performed special service, the decision is already creating much feeling, and more is expected to follow the elections."

Congressman Faris was seen last night at his home on north Sixth street and asked about the above story. Mr. Faris had seen it and stated that its appearance in the Express yesterday morning gave him the first information he had had in regard to the alleged agreement concerning the manner of deciding upon postmasters for this state. So it appears that the "plan" that the Indiana congressmen have "hit upon" has been "hit upon" with Mr. Faris left out. This fact gives room for the suspicion that the whole story is without foundation. Mr. Faris did not discuss the matter further than to say:

"I have never heard from any Indiana congressman, directly or indirectly, by letter or otherwise, anything whatever bearing on the matter referred to in the Indianapolis dispatch. The publication of this morning contains the only information I possess on the subject."

More Curative Power.

Is contained in a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla than in any other similar preparation. It costs the proprietor and manufacturer more. It costs the jobber more and it is worth more to the consumer. It has a record of cures unknown to any other preparation. It is the best to buy because it is the One True Blood Purifier.

Hood's Pills are the best family cathartic and liver medicine. Gentle, reliable, sure.

Nervous

People find just the help they so much need, in Hood's Sarsaparilla. It furnishes the desired strength by purifying, vitalizing and enriching the blood, and thus builds up the nerves, tones the stomach and regulates the whole system. Read this:

"I want to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla. My health run down, and I had the grip. After that, my heart and nervous system were badly affected, so that I could not do my own work. Our physician gave me some help, but did not cure. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Soon I could do all my own housework. I have taken

The Godowsky Recital.

The Godowsky recital last evening in Meharry hall drew a medium sized audience. Mr. Godowsky is small of stature but he puts an amazing force and fire into his work whenever it requires such. His program was over two hours in length—too long in fact for a strictly pianoforte recital. His repertoire is certainly an extensive one but he massed too much of a sameness into his selections last evening. As an artistic exhibition of pianoforte work Mr. Godowsky fully pleased the musicians present as was evidenced by liberal applause. The technique of the player was wonderful and his touch was as occasion required of a velvety softness. Among his Chopin numbers was the sonata containing the celebrated Chopin funeral march, which was feelingly interpreted. Some beautiful and weird effects were brought out in this number. The Spanish Rhapsody which closed the program was one of the best liked selections; however, the entire program was of strictly high grade artistic work. Mr. Godowsky's execution, use of the pedals and brilliant playing throughout was one of the finest interpretations of pianoforte works ever given in our city; in fact several of our musical critics place him pre-eminent in the many fine attractions furnished Greencastle by the school of music. The artist deserved a larger audience.

Greencastle Wheelmen Take Notice.

Nov. 12 will be remembered by crack wheelmen all over the world. On that day every living cyclist who held a record for from two to ten miles, inclusive, was compelled to acknowledge his inferiority to the little 100-pound champion, Jimmie Michael. Michael covered ten miles in 18:33 1-5, thereby lowering the best previous record for that distance by eight seconds. At the end of two miles 1 3-5 seconds had been clipped from the highest mark reached previously; at three miles 7 seconds had come off; at four miles, 6 seconds; at five miles, 4 4-5; at six miles, 8 2-5; at seven miles, 6 2-5; at eight miles, 6 3-5; at nine miles, 6 4-5, and at ten miles, 8 seconds. If the pace-makers had been fast enough to satisfy Michael, who called to them repeatedly to increase their speed, the records would probably have been lower still. Ten miles in 18:33 1-5, though, is a flying gait, and is quite sufficient to stir the blood of ambitious racing men for some time to come.

The Presbyterian Revival.

The meetings at the Presbyterian church are progressing with increasing interest and power. Last night a deep feeling seemed to pervade the entire audience which was unusually large for Monday night. A number indicated their desire to enter a christian life some by rising and others by signing cards. Nearly one hundred people bore testimony or led in prayer during the meeting and after meeting. The meetings will continue till Thursday night. Bible readings will be given each afternoon in the chapel at 2:30. Dr. Cryor will meet any who desire personal conversations after each Bible reading.

To suppress the Cigarette.

The W. C. T. U. women of the state are circulating petitions that will be presented to the senate and house of representatives of the state, asking them to pass a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of cigarettes in Indiana. The petitions have or will be circulated in this city and county. Among other things they will demand is the appointment of a police matron in every city in the state of over 10,000 inhabitants, a food inspector and the building of wards at hospitals for the cure of patients awaiting transfer.

Iron Foundations.

A new way of constructing a solid foundation for a tall building has been tried with success in Berlin. It was necessary to find a solid base sufficiently strong to carry a building weighing more than 10,000 tons. The plot of ground upon which the building was to stand was adjoined on both sides by high buildings, which rendered unsafe the digging to any depth for a foundation. The only way out of the difficulty was the sinking of a caisson in the center of the plot, upon the cemented top of which a hollow form of cement was built. Into this form molten iron was poured, filling up the space, and upon this cast iron foundation plate the understructure of the building now rests, while the side walls are supported by a cantilever structure. The full weight of the load upon the cast iron foundation is estimated at more than 20,000 tons.—New Ideas.

Noah and Money.

"The financial situation has caused considerable research on the subject," remarked the cheerful idiot to his pastor the other day. "I suppose," he continued, "that you have made a study of the monies of the Bible?"

"Oh, yes," replied the minister blandly. "I am familiar, to be sure, with the Biblical coins."

"I infer that paper money was used at the time of the flood," continued the idiot, sparring for a chance to make a home thrust.

"What has led you to this conclusion?" asked the pastor.

"Well, we read of where the dove brought the green back to Noah."—Washington Times.

His Prescription.

Boerhaave, the greatest doctor of his time, was anxious that it should go forth that even the most eminent doctor is somewhat of a "humbug." He carefully handed the key of a small diary to his executor, bade him open it immediately after his decease and let the contents go forth to the world at large. When the notebook was opened, all its pages but the last were blank, and on that final one there was written in large letters: "Directions to patients: Keep your feet warm and your head cool and trust for the rest to Providence."—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Lively Children.

"When you come in tonight," said the literary man to his two sprightly children, who were accustomed, when they came in from their evening walk, to walk straight into the library where he was at work and sit down and talk awhile. "I wish you would just say, 'How d'ye do?' and then go out. I have a lot of work to do tonight, and I don't want to be disturbed."

An hour later the literary man heard a latchkey placed carefully in the front door, as though the person placing it there didn't wish to be heard. Then he heard smothered laughter in the hall. It was from the children. They were up to something, sure. A moment later they came marching through the hall, one behind the other, with military step, back toward the library. They turned in, marched like a file of soldiers alongside the library table on the side opposite the literary man, halted, fronted, raised their hands in salute and said in unison:

"How d'ye do?"

Then they faced to the left and marched out again, one behind the other, keeping step as before and keeping as sober as they could, until they came to the parlor. There they exploded.—New York Sun.

In the circuit court Monday and Tuesday the case of State vs. Ballenger, charged with assault and battery with intent, occupied most of the time. The case grew out of an assault upon Wm. Eperson by Ballenger at Barnard on Nov. 3, and the defense did not deny an assault; they sought, however, to defeat the intent charge and many witnesses were examined on both sides. The prosecution closed at ten o'clock Tuesday.

A retail merchant of great experience and a close observer, gives this advice to advertisers. Either advertise something fairly good at a very low price, and thus bring out the strength of the price, or advertise something exceedingly good at a fair price, and thus bring out the quality of the goods advertised. You must either talk quality or talk price, and to talk one generally sells as many goods as to talk two at the same time.

DePauw University.

This Column Records the Best News in College Circles.

The Bloomington Telephone takes its turn at heart failure and says: "During the present foot ball season serious charges have been made against the athletic managers at DePauw regarding the employment of players at a stipulated salary, as members of the foot ball team representing that institution. These charges have so far, met with no refutation, and the attitude of the DePauw authorities compels the conclusion that they are based upon facts. The latest rumor, which has complete substantiation, is that the DePauw rush line is to be strengthened by the addition of a hired player from Danville, Ind. It is quite likely that this condition of affairs will be fully investigated by representatives of Indiana university and some means employed to place the teams of the two colleges on an equal footing. The members of Indiana's eleven are all bonafide students. Every reputable college in the country requires that their players shall be the same. Let DePauw prove her honesty and fairness on this matter or let her retire from the field of pure and untainted athletics."

Miss Ford, a former student of DePauw, is visiting Kappa sisters and friends in the university this week.

THE VIOLIN.

Oh, quivering strings, wherefrom the bow
Draws forth such heavenly sounds, I know
Your pain. Thus human hearts are strung
And from their tense chords music wrung.

PUZZLED DETECTIVE.

One morning early in June I was sent for by my employer, the head of a detective agency, and found a visitor with him. The latter rose when I entered, and the chief formally introduced us.

"Mr. Vincent," he said, addressing the gentleman, "this is Mr. Renshaw, the detective, whom I have been speaking to you about."

Mr. Vincent bowed, and I returned the salutation. "This is my card, sir," he said, handing me the piece of pasteboard as he spoke.

I looked at the card. It bore the name, "Mr. Horace Vincent," and in the corner the name of Mr. Vincent's firm, "Leggett & Vincent, Assayers to the Bank of Great Britain."

"We are in great trouble," said Mr. Vincent after a short pause. "We have reason to believe that one of our assistants is robbing us daily of the gold dust which passes through his hands."

"Indeed!" I returned. "Then why not have the gentleman arrested at once?"

Mr. Vincent shook his head. "That is impossible," he said, "quite impossible."

"May I ask why?" I said briskly. "We cannot do so, because there is not one jot of proof to justify such an arrest. Every man is searched nightly on leaving the premises, and this man whom we suspect has undergone the same treatment. Not one-tenth of an ounce of the dust has been found on his person on any occasion."

"Then why suspect him?" I asked somewhat impatiently.

"There is no one else to suspect. At our establishment we have some 20 assaying rooms, and each room has made up its accounts perfectly, with the exception of the room in which young Renshaw is employed. Month after month a considerable deficit occurs there."

"How are your searches conducted?" I asked after a short pause. "Do they preclude the slightest possibility of any concealment?"

"They do—most thoroughly. If Renshaw carried on him one grain of dust, it could not escape the eyes of our searcher. It is a dreadful mystery."

"If it is your wish that I should take the case in hand, I will come and have a look at your place and employees without delay."

Mr. Vincent shook hands with the chief, and I, having made a few necessary preparations, set out with the assayer for the scene of the trouble.

As he walked along I said: "What sort of fellow is this young Renshaw? Where did you pick him up?"

"Ah, that is the most sorrowful part of the whole business," replied Mr. Vincent. "His father was my oldest friend, and when he lay dying he confided the boy to me. He showed great aptitude for the business, and I gave him full control of room 15. It is the most important room in the place, and the amount of raw material that passes through it daily is enormous."

"How much of the dust has been missed altogether?" I asked after a short pause. "Close on 150 ounces. You see, the robberies have been extending over some time now, and we are determined to either find the thief or discharge every man in our employ."

"I hope that there will be no need for such an extreme measure," I remarked. "Doubtless we shall be able to bring home the crime to the culprit."

"I hope so, indeed," he said, earnestly. "The worry entailed on my partner and me by these disgraceful depredations has been very great, and we would willingly forfeit a large amount of money to run the thief to earth."

No more was said until we reached the assaying rooms. Mr. Vincent opened the door and, bidding me follow him, passed rapidly into the room, No. 15, where the robberies had been committed.

A young fellow was bending over a pair of hair scales as we entered.

"That is Renshaw," whispered Mr. Vincent. "Quite a youngster, as you see."

Renshaw, becoming aware of my presence, looked up. I am something of a reader of physiognomy, and reading that face, I disusted it at once.

Dissipation had set its mark on his features, and his eyes bore a shifty, deceitful light, which gave them a repulsive look. Although I am not given to jumping at conclusions, I could not help saying to myself, "That is our bird."

Mr. Vincent was the first to speak. "Renshaw," he said in a low voice, "I am indeed grieved that I should have to speak to you as I am going to speak, but there is no alternative. This gentleman is a private detective. He has come to inquire into the mysterious disappearance of the gold dust from this room."

"Well," said Renshaw sulkily, "what has that to do with me, sir?"

"I only hope for your sake and your dead father's sake that it has indeed nothing to do with you," returned Mr. Vincent sadly. "But the facts are so black against you that I have determined to take up the matter now and pierce the heart of the mystery. Renshaw, it is not too late to confess. I will not be hard on you, nor will Mr. Leggett."

"I have nothing to confess," he returned moodily. "I have never taken anything out of this room that was not my own property."

"If you are speaking the truth," said Mr. Vincent, not unkindly, "how do you explain that there is such a remarkable deficit at the end of each month in the accounts connected with room 15? Nobody besides yourself is allowed in here. To whom else can we look for an explanation?"

"I cannot help you, sir," he said quietly. "I am very sorry, of course, for what has occurred, but it is out of my power to do anything in the matter."

He paused, and then broke out, almost passionately.

"Haven't you searched me night after night as if I were a dock laborer?" he said. "Surely, if I had stolen anything, it would have been found on me then. What more do you want?"

Mr. Vincent put his hand gently on his shoulder.

"We want to find the culprit, my boy; that's all. There is some great puzzle here—some strange mystery, black as night. Renshaw, if you will take a last chance, I offer it to you now. If you are connected with this business, speak out, and I promise you the law shall not touch you. Lose this opportunity and then the law shall go to work, and if it, indeed, can convict you, then we shall have no mercy on you. What is your answer?"

Renshaw looked up sulkily.

"My answer is as before," he said slowly.

ly. "I know nothing whatever of the affair. If I did, I would say so. As I don't, I can't."

We left him alone, and I went to Mr. Vincent's private room, where we spent half an hour in earnest consultation.

"My opinion," I said, "is certainly that the youth is guilty and that he has discovered some method of hiding his spoils from the searchers night after night."

"But what method could he possibly use?" asked Mr. Vincent, putting his hand to his forehead in despair. "Nothing escapes the searchers—absolutely nothing."

"I am not so sure of that," I returned slowly. "So-called men are only human after all, and possibly a most simple trick has deceived them. Is there any means by which Renshaw could be watched from a room above?"

"Curiously enough," replied Mr. Vincent, "there happens to be a skylight in room 15. Perhaps you noticed it when you were there? Through that skylight you would have ample opportunity of seeing how he employs himself."

"Very well," I said. "It is no use my watching him now, as he will, of course, be on his guard. In a week's time I will return. Meanwhile, you will, of course, keep your own counsel and let no inkling as to my visit leak out in the place."

He reassured me heartily on this point, and then we shook hands and parted.

A week later I took up my position above the skylight and watched the young assayer closely.

I must confess that he did nothing whatever of a suspicious nature. He pursued his work calmly and methodically, showing himself to be a very industrious workman.

He had a habit or mannerism which seemed to me rather strange in so young a man. It might be natural, or it might be affected, but every now and again he would pause in his work and pass his long, nervous hands through his bushy, auburn hair, as though trying to collect his thoughts. It reminded me very forcibly of a mannerism of Henry Irving, and I thought it possible that Renshaw might be a bit stage struck, and had, consciously or unconsciously, adopted the mannerism of the great actor.

Throughout the day I staid in my uncomfortable position, eliciting nothing. At 5 o'clock the establishment closed, and I came down from my perch and went straight to Mr. Vincent's room.

"Mr. Vincent," I said, "my search has been useless so far. I am now going round to Renshaw's place of residence, and I want you to give me his address and invent some pretext for keeping him here for, say, half an hour while I pursue my investigations."

"Very well," he replied promptly, and then ringing a bell he told the messenger who answered it to detain Renshaw and not let him go until he had seen him. The messenger having departed, Mr. Vincent wrote the address of the young man on a slip of paper.

Jumping into a hansom, I drove as fast as the cab would take me to 23 Acadia Villas, Brixton, where Renshaw lodged. Arrived there, I presented my card, and having sufficiently overawed the landlady by the magic name of "detective" I was ushered up into Renshaw's room and left alone. I had, of course, cautioned the woman against giving him the slightest hint when he came of my visit.

Then I examined the room closely. In one of the drawers I found a collection of tradesmen's bills, which proved clearly that my "bird" had been going it for some time past. One of the bills rather astonished me, for it was for a bottle of aniline hair dye.

"What on earth should he want to dye his hair for?" I pondered—and then it flashed upon me like a lightning stroke that Renshaw's auburn hair had never seemed to me to be quite genuine. But why should he desire to change its color?

As I stood thinking I heard his step on the stairs. In a moment I had darted behind a screen, which fortunately happened to be standing in a corner of the room, and waited for his entry.

He came in hurriedly and sat down on the bed. Then he looked in his water can and found it empty.

He went to the door and called out: "Mrs. Martin! I wish you would send up some water at once. You know I always like to have a wash directly I get back."

"Funny thing, this desire for cleanliness," I thought. "I saw him wash his hands at 5 o'clock tonight before leaving the assaying room. He is quite fanatical on the subject of soap and water."

Up came the servant in a moment, carrying with her a huge can. Renshaw thanked her, and having set the can down he locked the door and made preparations for washing.

He filled the basin and put his head under water for about 40 seconds, slowly raising it at
